24TH NOVEMBER 2012

Join the Herd Celebrate Penrith's rich agricultural heritage with a mystical masked procession of fire and light that will wind its way through the streets. The Winter Drovning is a new event for Penrith and Eden taking place on 24th November 2012. Featuring fire, masks, music and mayhem, the Winter Drovning is a celebration of all things rural, magical, traditional and fun.

The procession will begin at 6pm and work its way through the centre of town including, Middlegate and King Street. The finale will take place in Great Dockray with live music and merriment until 9pm.

COME ON DOWN! You don't have to 'do' anything other than watch, but if there is a rule then it would be WEAR A MASK. Your mask can be anything you like, but we encourage all things traditional, rural and animals aplenty. If you can't find the inspiration to make a mask, there will be some available to buy on the day. You can also download free mask templates from the Eden Arts website.

If you would like to be part of the procession – carry a fire torch, lantern or wear a mask sign up online at www.edenarts.co.uk/winterdrovning
